BANKING, REAL ESTATE AND ZONING TREATED IN PROMOTIVE SURVEY

Comparative Figures Show Banking Resources Are Ample—Investment at Home Would Provide Funds for Building—Zoning Plan Would Make Investments More Secure.

The sixth installment of the Promotive Survey of Kingston which appears in The Freeman today discusses the topics of banking, credits, real estate values, building and zoning, as follows:

Banking.
There is no convenient yardstick by which the banking facilities of a community may be measured other than the combined resources of the banking institutions. This is not a wholly satisfactory basis of judgment in that it in no wise indicates the service policy of the banks nor their attitude toward local enterprise.

The following table shows the position of Kingston as compared to seven other cities having approximately the same population and same general conditions:

	Combined Banking Resources
Kingston	22,957
Cobleskill	22,075
Glensville	26,688
Lockport	21,308
Oneonta	20,506
Orangeburg	23,626
Shenandoah	26,341
White Plains	21,031

As will be seen from the above, Kingston does not appear in an unfavorable light. Moreover, the banking service of Kingston is complete in that there are two savings banks, four national banks and one trust company.

There are two objectives which might be set before the banking institutions of Kingston and which, if accomplished, would not alone result in great benefit to the community as well. The first of these is to reach to the citizens of the community the reasonable function and scope of banking. The second is to develop an organized agency which would be effective in accumulating capital for strictly local investments.

It is realized that the banks operating individually in a measure accomplish both of the above purposes, but the fact that the banks in every community are the target for continued complaint is sufficient testimony to the point accomplished.

If it were possible to get before the people of Kingston a popular conception of the true functions of a bank, the first step would have been taken. The average citizen should know that the bank acts as an agency for the accumulation of savings and also creates credit; or, in a more technical view, creates deposits and loans credits. In reality, the latter two operations are simultaneous rather than in the order given. At any rate, it should be understood that it is credit rather than actual money which the bank loans. Credit is the medium through which business is transacted and it is the purpose of the bank to transfer surplus credits from the point of accumulation to the point of need. It is here that banks must often fail under criticism for the reason that there is never enough credit to meet the need of those who want it.

If the time should come when the banks of any community "had enough money" or credits to more than satisfy the needs of all business enterprises, "money" would become a drug on the market and would cease to earn interest. With our present highly organized banking system through which credits and surplus capital may be readily transferred from one point to another, a condition in which the use of money or credit would not earn interest, would be a condition of general business stagnation in which the investment and progressiveness of men had been outrun by accumulation of capital.

Considering for the moment the extreme illustration given above, it is easy to realize why banks are so often looked upon as short-sighted and unprogressive. Even the legitimate borrower may find it difficult to satisfy his needs, and his criticism, added to that of those who continually seek money for unsound ventures, will result in a mountain of complaints. In such cases, criticism of banks is unjust and due to a condition which cannot be remedied other than by popular education which causes the public to be in its judgment.

On the contrary, the bank may be justifiably criticized if it acts as an agency for the accumulation of local funds which are used for investment in outside securities because they are slightly more attractive than any funds available locally. While it may be argued that such a policy is something for determination by the officers of the bank, it is equally true that the public is justified in refusing to do business with such an institution. Instead of adding to the fertility of its own field, such a bank is "draining the soil."

Many bankers as well as business men recognize the fact that in the absence of a sound banking system, there is always less capital invested in business than there should be. A considerable percentage of the failures in normal times are caused by shortage of capital. Individual businesses find themselves unable to finance the volume of trade that is necessary to meet fixed charges and general overhead. The historical behavior of business when threatened by a money panic is merely a wild scramble by individuals to lay hold of the insufficient supply of

"investment capital." Commercial banks should not be expected to furnish the invested capital for any business. This is the work of the investment banker. Whenever the commercial banker attempts to offer investments to his own clients, he is really bound to sell only seasoned securities or those having the backing of some large investment house of unquestioned standing.

Since the responsible investment house find all the business which they can handle in the offerings of large security issues, it has become a custom—almost a fashion—to refuse to handle the stock or bond issues of small concerns.

The centralization of the investment banking organization of America in New York and Chicago has resulted in an interlocking of interests that at times seem to control the sales organizations of all the established investment banks in groups throughout the greater part of the United States. This investment banker in Springfield, Illinois, though he may be the owner of his business, is nevertheless dependent upon some larger investment banking house in Chicago or New York which supplies him throughout the year with various offerings of desirable bonds or stocks. The investment banker in the smaller city dare not cut himself loose from this profitable business and yet if he maintains the connection he finds himself unable usually to take care of any small local issues of bond or stock.

The vastness of this interlocking relationship between the investment bankers in the two great centers and the multitude of smaller selling agencies (frequently as department stores in small cities) commercial banks is not at all understood by the general public. One single bond house has its selling agencies covering practically every county north of the Ohio river and west to the Missouri. Money is gathered up from the country villages of Iowa or the manufacturing towns of Ohio and concentrated in Chicago or New York to build apartment houses, hotels and office buildings. This concentration of investment capital is increasing amazingly. As great bond houses master the art of organizing their sales forces to cover more and more territory and to get into the smaller and smaller towns, the drainage of capital from the small communities will become almost complete.

The practical working of this system makes it increasingly difficult to sell a small local security issue in its own home city. There is no sales organization ready to handle it. Nor is there any background of confidence in local securities to make possible the sale of local issues except in a few unusual cases. There have been and still are local business institutions in Kingston that enjoy more credit than they need. Credit in its essence is a form of confidence and therefore is available to those who are most favorably known to bankers and banks. In an old community like Kingston, credit is to be available to businesses that are controlled by old residents. There may be shown a degree of unconscious skepticism toward new men and new institutions. However, an examination of this matter would produce nothing but conflicting statements. In such cases it is impossible to define the degree of confidence or credit that is the just due of a man or a business.

Kingston's immediate need for "investment capital" to go into the building of houses is a fact. Credit on industrial development is made to the custom of building and loan associations in Philadelphia regarding second mortgage loans. It is pointless for any Kingston man to assert that plenty of savings bank money is available for house building. First mortgage money for that purpose can be had in any city on the American continent on terms quite as favorable as Kingston will offer. But the local restrictions on savings banks in making real estate loans are so stringent as to provide a 75 percent or 80 percent loan on any property. Yet the erection and sale of new houses in every growing city of America has come to the point where a 20 percent initial payment is sufficient to effect the sale. An 80 percent loan becomes a necessity. There are conservative men not acquainted with the established custom in the real estate field who will raise criticisms of the soundness of an 80 percent loan against a home. They will point to the law restricting savings banks from making such loans as they would to the Ark of the Covenant. They forget that the law when passed was simply an expression of the business expert's experience of America since the law was passed. It is impossible to think that the successful real estate operators in a hundred American cities who build thousands of houses each year and tell them on a 20 percent payment are all crack-brained followers of a banking craze. The second mortgage is a "second mortgage" only because the first mortgage on homes in American cities is so restricted as to totally fail in accomplishing the purpose for which it was designed a half century ago. The time is not distant when in many American cities there will be only a first mortgage on homes and it will cover the entire

NEIGHBORHOOD BARGAIN DAYS ON TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Especially Planned for Folks From Neighboring Communities, but Kingston People Will be Welcome to Come and Meet Their Neighbors, Inspect the Stores and Buy if They Care To.

Kingston's Co-operating Merchants have arranged to hold the first of their Neighborhood Bargain Days on Tuesday and the second on Wednesday. They have made a special effort to bring in visitors from the neighboring towns by offering the right kind of goods at the right prices. Of course they do this every day, but there will be some special displays, special prices and unusual opportunities on these days.

While this is Neighborhood Bargain Day, the opportunities it offers are extended to Kingston folks as well, as is shown by advertisements in The Freeman today.

Kingston's Co-operating Merchants, who have the affair in charge, are as follows:

MGR. MOONEY DIED SUNDAY NIGHT

Nated Catholic Prelate, Member of Kingston Family, Deceased Many High Honors—Was in Eighty-third Year.

Monsignor Joseph F. Mooney, member of a well known Kingston family and for many years one of the most noted Catholic prelates in the Archdiocese of New York, died Sunday night at the rectory of the Sacred Heart Church, 457 West Fifty-first street, New York city, in his eighty-third year. A succession of paralytic strokes after a long illness had gradually weakened him so that for a long time he was able to get about only in a wheel chair. Ten days ago he suffered another stroke and since then his condition had been exceedingly serious. During the last eight weeks his illness was further complicated by pneumonia. On Saturday Mgr. Mooney sank into a coma from which he never revived.

Parents Kingston Residents.

Joseph F. Mooney was born July 5, 1840, in Pike County, Pa., during a visit of his parents there. Their home was in Kingston. At the age of thirteen he was graduated from Fordham University and the following season he began his theological studies at St. Joseph's Seminary in Troy. He was ordained a priest on June 2, 1871, and was appointed as an assistant at St. Stephen's Church in East Twenty-eighth street. Soon after he was appointed to be professor of philosophy at St. Joseph's Seminary. He remained there eight years, leaving to become pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Newburgh.

In 1890 he went to the Church of the Sacred Heart in Fifty-fifth street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, where he remained for a number of years. In 1897 he was appointed as one of the largest parishes in New York. Through Mgr. Mooney's efforts Sacred Heart has one of the largest parishes in the Archdiocese. The Catholic Directory for 1922 lists the number of girl students as 1,500, the number of boys as 1,300. The school plant is considered one of the most complete in New York.

In 1892, after he had been a New York pastor for two years, Mgr. Mooney became Vicar General of the Archdiocese. Four years later Pope Leo XIII. appointed him a domestic prelate.

Between the death of Archbishop Michael A. Corrigan and the elevation of Archbishop John M. Farley, Mgr. Mooney administered the affairs of the Archdiocese and again during the period between Cardinal Farley's death and the elevation of Archbishop Hayes. During the absence of those prelates in Europe or other where, it was Mgr. Mooney who acted in their stead.

He also held another office, that of protonotary apostolic, conferred on him by the pope in 1904, carrying with it certain times the privilege of mitre and crozier, a privilege, however, which Mgr. Mooney in his humility seldom could be prevailed upon to exercise. Pope Leo conferred this honor on March 10, 1904.

Could Have Been Bishop.
Several times during his career Mgr. Mooney, latterly one of the oldest prelates in the archdiocese, could have been elevated to a bishopric, but he preferred to remain in the ranks of the clergy. On the last anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood, Cardinal Farley publicly announced that he had offered Mgr. Mooney the office of Auxiliary Bishop of New York, but that the prelate had declined with thanks.

Several times, when vacancies in New York were occurred, dispatches from Rome announced that Mgr. Mooney was being considered, notably when the Right Rev. James Edward Quigley, Bishop of Buffalo, became Archbishop of Chicago.

Developed Parochial Schools.
Mgr. Mooney was intensely interested in the development of parochial schools, as is witnessed by the development of the Sacred Heart School in his own parish. He was president of the Parochial School Board, an important diocesan organization, and also served as moderator or principal director of the Archdiocesan Union of the Holy Name Societies.

His special interest in marked epochs in the life of his parish and was celebrated with great rejoicing by his devoted friends and parishioners. It may safely be said of him that he was one of the most popular clergymen of the Roman Catholic faith in this city, a picture whose name was never forgotten and who from all who came in contact with him. On each of his anniversaries he got a purse amounting to a great thousand dollars, which he promptly devoted to some church work.

The last such anniversary was his golden jubilee, observed June, 1921. Mgr. Mooney previously had become partly paralyzed and had been in St. Vincent's Hospital for some months. His illness, as a matter of fact, and kept him between his home and the hospital for some years. Headed by Mgr. John J. Dunn, now Auxiliary Bishop of New York, the prelates of the Archdiocese knew Mgr. Mooney a limousine. When the committee of presentation called upon him in St. Vincent's, Mgr. Mooney was able to inspect his present and the following day drove to church in it. There he found Archbishop Hayes and scores of elegantly clothed laymen, while many members of his congregation were unable to get into the church on account of the throng.

Aided by a young priest, Mgr. Mooney walked into the church, but after the long solemn high Mass he was unable to walk from his seat. So he was wheeled down the center aisle of the church in a chair, followed by a procession of clergy. His

GIRL WHO WOULD BE BOY, RETURNS

Ida Bush, 14 Years Old, Ran Away Because She Could Not Learn Her Lessons.

Ida Bush, the 14-year-old girl who ran away from home last week again at her home, 60 Cedar street. She was brought home Saturday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hilborn of Holenville, at whose home the girl had been stopping.

On the day Ida went away, Mr. Hilborn while on his way from Kingston, where he had been buying some chicken wire, was stopped on the state road by what he supposed was a boy, who asked for a ride. He stopped his Ford and asked the "boy" who said his name was Tom, to get in the car. Ida told him of being on the way to the mountains to seek a job and Mr. Hilborn thinking his passenger was a boy said he would take him to his house where he could stay with him and his wife.

When he got home the "boy" carried a small roll of wire to the house and Mrs. Hilborn noticed that instead of placing the wire on "his" arms, she told her husband that "Tom" was a girl and not a boy and the next day Mrs. Hilborn questioned her and she confessed having run away from home. Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Hilborn placed the girl in the Ford and came to the court house with her. Under Sheriff Haulbeck, who had been notified over the telephone of the girl coming by State Trooper Ross, who was at Shokan and had been told by Mr. Hilborn that he had a runaway girl in the car and was taking her home, informed Mrs. Bush that her daughter had been found.

Ida was taken to her home by Mr. and Mrs. Hilborn from the court house. She told Sheriff Haulbeck that she did not run away because she did not like to go to school, but because she was unable to learn her lessons.

WEALTHY DOCTOR BUYS GOULD FARM

Dr. Barker, a wealthy New York city man, has purchased the Jay Gould farm along the Beaverkill, in the town of Hardenburgh, and will erect a handsome residence there, which is expected to cost $100,000.

The building will be fireproof, the walls being of hollow tile and the ceilings and floors of concrete. The contract has been awarded to A. J. Scott and work will be commenced within a few days.

W. C. T. U. Rally at Plattekill.
The ladies of Plattekill W. C. T. U. will hold a rally day meeting for the cause of law enforcement, citizenship, Americanization and child welfare, Wednesday, May 16, at the Plattekill M. E. Church near Plattekill. Hour of meeting 7:30, standard time. All citizens are invited to come and it is hoped that the membership will also be well represented. A good program will be rendered, after which refreshments may be served. County President Mrs. J. A. Palen of Wallkill, will be present.

New Dairymen's League Quarters.
The State Dairymen's League Association, Inc., has removed its headquarters from Ulster to New York. Marked increase in the sales activities of the organization, which represents 70,000 farmers and milk producers annually more than 1,000,000 pounds of milk, made the change necessary, officials state.

Injured in Taxi Accident.
Mgr. Mooney's health began to fail soon after he was injured in 1912 in a taxi accident, while riding from Cardinal Farley's residence to his own home in December, 1920. He fell unconscious in his office at Cathedral College.

In his prime, he was one of the most prominent Catholic preachers in the city. It was he who preached the sermon at the consecration of Mr. Hayes as Auxiliary Bishop of New York. During the war he was active in the interest of national drives, and it was his name which was secured to all diocesan pastors urging the buying of Liberty Bonds and the conservation of food and other things necessary for the war.

While ill at St. Vincent's in January last, Mgr. Mooney was made an honorary member of the Knights of Columbus, Fordham, New York. Dame University and Mount St. Mary's College, Maryland, conferred honor degrees of LL. D. upon him. Monsignor Mooney was the last of his family, Richard Mooney, for several years postmaster at Rondout, died a number of years ago. NEGRO WHO USED KNIFE IS JAILED

James Green, Also Fined $30 for Slashing Police's Sunday Night at East Kingston—Other Negroes Held for Grand Jury.

James Green, the negro who was arrested Saturday night at East Kingston after slashing Tony DeCicca with a knife in the forehead, was arraigned before Justice Webster at Plattekill this morning by State Trooper Roche on a charge of assault in the third degree. He was found guilty and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail and fined $30.

Another Hill and William Boyd, two other negroes, were held to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of violation of the Sullivan law in carrying concealed weapons.

Phillip Rogers, a negro, who was jailed for thirty days for disorderly conduct Sunday morning, is known as "Pistol Pete." He attempted to assault Trooper Roche.

BELIEVE WOMAN USED POISON PEN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 14.—A young woman will be named as the author of the "Poison Pen" letters which have poured through the mails to besmirch the character of scores of well-to-do and socially prominent. The girl will be formally accused by George Maxwell, composer and music publisher, his friends assisted today. Maxwell is under indictment in connection with the alleged plot.

Maxwell, who is in London, will sail for the United States next Wednesday, friends said. They said he has long suspected a certain young woman and that he will reveal her identity on his return to New York.

The composers' friends are rallying to his support. The Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is planning a meeting for tomorrow and it is expected they will give him a vote of confidence.

MATINEE FESTIVAL OF C. D. OF A. OPENS THURSDAY

The plans for the Matinee Festival to be held by the Catholic Daughters of America on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week are now complete and it is expected that it will be one of the largest events of the year.

The festival will be opened on Thursday evening by Mayor Crane and Father Scully. It will be held at St. Mary's Hall, where the ladies have erected a number of booths with some decidedly original features.

This is not an old-fashioned bazaar where chances are sold. No chances will be sold at this festival but many beautiful articles will be sold at most reasonable prices. There will be music and dancing every evening and everyone is invited to visit the festival.

INTERESTING TALK TO HOLY NAME SOCIETY

At the regular meeting of St. Mary's Holy Name Society Sunday evening a very interesting talk was given by John J. Finnerty, Jr., principal of School No. 1. He explained the value of the night school and also of the part time or continuation school and the methods used in the instruction of those attending.

PROMOTIVE SURVEY

It is required to enable the owner to pay the war debts of the country.

While the Kingston are suffering for lack of money to build, it is usually the case that the amounts of capital leave the country for investment in bonds and other securities in New York.

The Chamber of Commerce for the United States and Canada, in the long run, profits from the local banker and the progress is hampered at its source.

While the manufacturer and the community at large realize that they have a common cause, they are not working together, and a solution of the common problem. The Chamber of Commerce finds a way to use its accumulated capital for the development of the city.

While much fruitless effort has been expended in such efforts in other cities, it is worth while to effect the following definite suggestions, namely, that the bankers in Kingston, commercially or otherwise, endeavor to give to Kingston an investment banking service comparable to that of the larger city. This will require a great deal of courage and enterprise, but it is not an impossible task.

Real Estate.

Among the business interests of a city, real estate stands alone in its enjoyment of some participation in the results of every effort toward city building. A promotional plan may be devised to increase real estate value. It is successful in its major purpose, it will ultimately increase real estate value. If a successful plan for industrial development is launched, real estate prices will rise. When the community carries through a city planning or zoning scheme, real estate values are the direct beneficiaries.

Another view of the same fact will be obtained in a simple calculation. The value of taxable property in Kingston is $12,567,150. This does not include personal property, special valuations or exemptions. The area of the city is 4,775 acres. The average value of the land is $2.61 per acre. The average value of the city is $2.61 per acre. The average value of the city is $2.61 per acre.

New for the New

MOVING into the new home suggests an escape from much old, worn-out furniture which has been long ago mentally discarded. It is a fine time to make long-undended replacements—to get the new dining room suite which will increase the pleasure of entertaining, the comfortable davenport for the living room, or the reed chaise longue for the sun parlor.

Every new home should have some new furniture. And while "newness" is the keynote of all the selections to be found in our store, we offer only furniture that is also beautiful in design, worthy of workmanship and sound in value.

Tools of His Trade

Common law recognizes and upholds the right of a workman to his tools—his basic means of survival and maintenance.

The tools of a business enterprise are no less essential. It must have and use certain instrumentalities to get business, to do business and to hold business.

Having them, it grows and brings forth fruit—provided the tools are intelligently directed.

Deprived of them, it becomes stunted, withers, and eventually dies—no amount of intelligence can save it, lacking means of application.

The prime concern of any business is to get orders. It must have and use personal solicitors and advertising—the twin tools of salesmanship.

And when a business is ordered by its bank to curtail or stop the use of these productive forces—either or both—that business is being deprived of its tools.

Give business the right to progress!

BOY SCOUTS

BOY SCOUTS FOREST AIDES

An important achievement of boy scouts in every part of the country is their work in forest protection. Numerous reports of active and enthusiastic work of these boys in conserving our forests, which mean so much to scouting, as well as to all the people of this land. Pennsylvania has recently awarded 140 medals for valor and efficiency in forest conservation to boy scouts of that state. During the summer camping season in the state of Washington a small town was saved by scouts camping nearby from a terrible forest fire that was rapidly spreading to the edge of the town. In Idaho the scouts during their vacation manned observation posts in the forest's heart and signaled to the chief forester news of any conflagrations which they detected. Talks have been made by the boys in homes, schools, theaters and before business clubs giving facts about the damage from fire. Parades have been arranged and posters and leaflets distributed. Field tests also have been conducted to show the right way to build and extinguish fires.

When it is realized that two-thirds of the original forests of the United States have already been killed, cut over or burned; that today we are cutting more of every class of timber than we are growing; and that we are using up three and one-half times as fast as they are grown the trees too small for the sawmill, but upon which our future lumber supply depends, the significance of the scouts' work is more fully understood.

In the state of New York alone, the scouts have already planted hundreds of acres of trees and are ready to do more to reclaim the land and to reduce forest fires hereafter," says J. A. Simmons of the New York State Forestry Commission.

Yesterday, N. Y., set an interesting record last spring when in a single afternoon 12 troops planted 2,000 trees on the city watershed.

In the 11th on Columbus day the Albany (N. Y.) scouts planted 4,000 trees at their camp on Kinderhook lake. Another excellent piece of work was that accomplished by the 25 scouts of Albany, N. Y., who last spring planted 2,000 white pine trees in the Community forest.

BOY SCOUTS AID NEAR EAST

The Boy Scouts of America are co-operating with the Near East Relief Committee in sending boy scouts to give instruction and aid off military, medical and sanitary equipment that may have in the war zone, to the Near East Relief station. Boy scouts who do not know the address of the state headquarters for the Near East Relief Committee may send packages to one of the following Near East Relief stations:

157 West 42nd and 43rd streets, New York, N. Y.; 100 South La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.; 701 South 10th street, Kansas City, Mo.; Northeast corner Broad and Lehigh streets, Philadelphia, Pa.; 1614 Bryn Mawr, Dallas, Texas; 305 Oneida building, Minneapolis, Minn.; 100 Georgia Savings Bank building, Atlanta, Ga.; 1215 13th building, Boston, Mass.; 401 the 1800 Pacific building, Cleveland, Ohio; Y. M. C. A. building, Memphis, Tenn.; 722 Peyton building, Spokane, Wash.

All scout leaders are asked to assist in this attempt to save 15,000 boys of scout age who are starving and going without the necessary clothing. Most of these boys are practicing the scouting program and in many cases doing exceptional work.

SCOUTING AND SCHOOLS

Two of the latest developments worth noticing in the close relations between scouting and public schools are that the "Elementary School Bulletin," which is the official publication of the board of education of that city, devoted its entire issue of February to discussing in detail the official recognition that the board of education gives to scouting and the active cooperation which is given to the scouts as part of the board of education work.

And in Atlanta, Georgia, another official publication of the board of education is a pamphlet entitled "Public Course—Atlanta Public School Boy Scout Lessons." This pamphlet outlines in five lessons the citizenship training of the Boy Scouts of America, which is taught to all of the pupils of the public schools of Atlanta.

BOY SCOUTS LEARN BANKING

The Garfield Park State bank of Chicago on a recent Saturday morning placed in all its official positions working boy scouts; through the instruction of the former officials who remained with them the scouts learned how the banking business is conducted. The privilege extended these boys is typical of the opportunities in vocational training being offered to boy scouts by broad-minded men, heart and soul in the development of a resourceful, intelligent manhood of tomorrow.

COOL MILLION IS SPENT BY MESS BOY IN ONE DAY

Reinhardt Schmidt From Germany Has Glorious Time, Due to Fast Skumping Mark.

Most every boy and girl in America at some time has sat down and heard the barn or in the trade of the entrance to the apartment house of somewhere and said: "Wish I had a million dollars—I'd go to the show and buy candy and—"

Well, everyone knows how it goes. And over in Germany boys and girls aren't much different down deep in their hearts then they are in America, perhaps.

With this exception—

Reinhardt Schmidt, aged fourteen, of Hamburg, Germany, captain's mess boy on the German steamer Hans Heister, has had his wish come true.

When he was back in Germany he did his wishing—only, of course, he wished for marks instead of dollars. Then he came to San Francisco and out stepped a fairy or something and all of a sudden young Reinhardt found himself in the midst of riches.

A newspaper reporter found Reinhardt interesting. He told his editor, and as a result, a girl reporter was assigned to give Reinhardt one memorable day.

The lad was running around the decks of the big freighter which had been his home for months, when the mate stopped him and told him that for the day he was to have shore leave and be the guest of the fair lady, who awaited at the gang plank.

Bewildered but anxious for just one taste of real fun, he eagerly accepted. And the day started, Reinhardt would not do as he pleased. And the lady would foot the bill.

It started with candy at the ferry building.

Then a ride through the city in a luxurious sedan—the likes of which Reinhardt had never seen.

Then to a store for a pair of good American shoes to replace the wooden ones he wore. Then lunch at the city's most fashionable hotel—the first fruit he had tasted for eight months was served him in a fruit cocktail; next soup, chicken pie, apple pie with ice cream, and quantities of milk.

"I drink no alcohol," he announced in German. "But milk, at home it is so expensive." He revelled in bottles of it.

Then a trip to the top of the tallest building in the city, and next, out to the beach to the roller coaster, the merry-go-round and all the other wonders.

Reinhardt was gaining his police and he hardly could wait for each successive thrill.

"Powder River—better back," he shouted in his funny English as he mounted a pony on the merry-go-round and waved his cap, cowboy fashion.

No satisfactory explanation could be secured as to where he picked up the phrase, but it was good evidence that somewhere back in the days of the war he had met someone who knew something of the Ninety-first division which crashed through the Argonne forest with that battle cry.

WILLS REWARD TO VIRTUOUS

Marriage of Plain Venus and Ugly Hercules Sought.

Virtue is to be rewarded in Thonon-les-Bains, a town on Lake Geneva in the department Haute-Savoie, France. A clause in the will of Mme. Caroline Geoffroy, who died there recently, provides that the sum of 5,000 francs shall be paid annually to the young men and young women, twenty or twenty-one years of age, whom the mayor shall deem most virtuous.

"My object," wrote Mme. Geoffroy, "is to join in marriage a plain Venus and an ugly Hercules, who will procreate healthy, strong children, to the greater glory of France."

Paint for this house less than $33.00

YOU need only 8½ gallons of Certain-teed Outside White to paint a spacious home like this (40' x 32'). That means less than $33 for the paint. There is nothing more artistic than a nicely painted, white house in its setting of green lawn and shrubbery. When it takes so little paint to keep a fine home like this fresh and new, it is a pity to put off painting. Whatever the color let us show you the choice rich shades to be had in Certain-teed outside paint.

WE recommend Certain-teed paint because it gives our customers more for their money. Our experience is that Certain-teed has more body and wears longer than ordinary paint.

POUGHKEEPSIANS HERE TO DINE

Advisory Council of Luckey, Platt & Co. Come to Kingston for a Good Dinner and Get It.

The advisory council of Luckey, Platt & Co. of Poughkeepsie, composed of the officers of the corporation and heads of the principal departments, looking about for a suitable place to hold their annual dinner, settled on The Stuyvesant at Kingston this year, at the suggestion of William Schick, treasurer of the company, who is a former Kingstonian. The dinner was given on Saturday evening and after it was over Mr. Schick was congratulated by his associates on being "some picker" of a place to dine, even though he had not picked very good weather for the trip.

After the dinner Mr. Carey, vice-president of the company, expressed his satisfaction with the trip and the dinner and gave an estimate of the population of Kingston made on a new basis. He called attention to the fact that the current issues of the Albany Knickerbocker-Press, published in a city of about 160,000 population, had 16 pages—one page for each 10,000 of population. The Freeman contained 16 pages for 100,000 population. Referring to Kingston's streets, lighting, parks and business men, Mr. Carey expressed the hope that the new Poughkeepsie bridge would be another link to bind the cities of the Hudson river valley in one vast community of interest. No river in the world approaches the Hudson in scenic beauty and none excels it in commercial opportunity. These facts are gradually coming to be appreciated and there should be unified effort to bring them more forcibly before the world.

After brief remarks by President Smith and an inspection of a picture of the new store which will be ready for the Christmas trade, the party broke up early enough to inspect some of Kingston's stores before returning to Poughkeepsie.

Those in the party were: William Schick, credit manager and treasurer; Roy Jackson, advertising manager; Ernest Young, merchandise manager; John Kling, merchandise manager; Edward Seeley, superintendent of premises; Peter D. Cornell, representative; Casper King, traffic manager; Edward F. Carey, vice-president; William DeGarmo Smith, president.

Kingston guests were T. J. Comerford and A. W. Hoffman, who welcomed the visitors, urged them to come again and gave them a special invitation to consider themselves our neighbors and come to the Neighborhood Bargain Days in Kingston on Tuesday and Wednesday.

This winsome little frock, a Paris model, is of gray taffeta, set off by Dutch collar and cuffs of white organdie and a necktie, skirt band and girdle of black satin.

Broad-Brimmed Chapeau for the Larger Women

There are rumors in millinery circles to the effect that the broad hat is coming in again. We have clung so persistently to the little tightly-fitting affairs that there is no doubt we would welcome a change. Large hats are clumsy to get about in and hard to keep in perfect shape, but then they have the advantage of being picturesque and of forming frames for the faces under them that add all sorts of charm and good looks.

Broad-brimmed hats are best for the larger women. They conform to their bigness in build. Their lines fit in with the lines of the clothes that such women must wear, and the spreading shapes do everything that is pleasant by way of throwing the countenances and the figures underneath them into the proportions that they should assume.

If a woman has a large face the little, draped turban hat does not suit her at all. If she will wear a small hat it must be built to order to assume the measurements that will fit the head and properly top off the face. Now, with the hat of large brim it is different. That is just naturally adapted to larger proportions and lines. It can be posed upon the head and it will look right at once. There need be no fussing about it.

The broad-brimmed hats of this season are made of rather transparent stuffs. Often the straw bonnets are so filmy in character that the hair and its dressed waves show through the crown almost as though there were no covering imposed. The crowns are round and simple, quite fitting the shaping of the head. Then the brims are flapping with wires only around their outer edges. The trimmings are flowers or ribbons or silk or velvet, or they are embroidered designs, but they are always put on with the utmost simplicity and arranged to show their own decorative effect.

Lattice Hat Crown Is Made by Home Milliner

The home milliner will find no difficulty in making the lattice crown which seems to be sponsored by the foremost designers. A piece of buckram is laid over the crown of the hat to ascertain the size and shape of the crown. Then the buckram is cut and laid flat. The entire surface is covered horizontally with bands of ribbon. Pieces of ribbon are drawn alternately over and under these bands, until the piece of buckram is covered lattice fashion. The ends of the ribbon are all securely tacked, and the covered buckram placed back over the crown of the hat. The ribbon ends are drawn tightly, and bound at the brim with a plain band of ribbon. Grosgrain and moire ribbons in the half-inch width are best adapted for this purpose.

Jabot Frill Features the Frocks for Spring

A movement which promises to be of great importance in spring frocks of silk, crepe or chiffon is that which introduces the jabot frill. It extends from neck to waist or from waist to hem, and is often repeated at the slit cuff.

From having comparatively small space in the smart frock, the frill has grown in length and importance. Sometimes it trails all the way down the back. Then again, it may start at the waistline, extend down the skirt, about the hem and up the back again to the shoulder.

In addition to this, there are double frill treatments. Two accordion-plaited ones may extend down the side seam of a frock and when the wearer moves give a rippling, circular movement like the fins of a fish.

Long Veils.

New veils from Paris come in prodigious lengths. One in the modish all-over vermicelli pattern is nearly three yards long. These veils fall in long lengths from the sides or back of the hat. Sometimes they are wound about the neck and fall in a long streamer over the left shoulder. In fact, the mode of adjusting the veil is merely a matter of individual fancy.

HURLED 45 FEET AND BROKE NECK

Plattekill, May 14.—A serious accident resulting in the death of Will Dempsky occurred Thursday night on the state road between Plattekill and Madison. The motorcycle on which Dempsky was riding collided with an automobile driven by his two brothers, Charles and Herman Dempsky.

The sudden impact wrenched him from the motorcycle, hurling him forty-five feet from his machine, causing his skull to be crushed. His neck broken and other injuries. He was rushed to Dr. Van-Isen's office, but died before regaining consciousness.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dempsky, he is survived by three sisters and five brothers.

The funeral was held at his late home Sunday afternoon, with burial at Highland Cemetery.

Curious Color Changes.

The possibility of a man's eyes changing their color as a result of mental shock or physical ill-treatment has been discussed by surgeons. "It is common knowledge," stated one medical man, "that great physical hardships may suddenly turn the hair white. The loss of color follows on certain chemical changes, due to disturbances of nutrition, taking place in the tiny particles of coloring matter which gave the hair its tint." All babies have blue eyes when they are born. In some infants pigment granules begin to develop in the iris immediately after birth. Thus they become black or brown-eyed. In others no such pigment formation takes place, and the eyes remain their original color throughout life.

The Library Voice.

One of the most distinctive of all the kinds of voices in the world is the library voice. It is pitched low, with little carrying capacity, and is like no other. Librarians have perfected the technique so well that they can make their conversation audible to one, two or three persons out of five, just as they wish. A person whom a librarian does not wish to address just doesn't hear the words. A library voice is more distinctive than a stage whisper. There is also a library cough, a library sneeze and a library laugh. Persons in the theater usually cough, sneeze and laugh as loud as possible but at the Detroit Public Library these manifestations are characterized by a hush, a note of awe.

"Lone Star State."

The nickname is derived from the flag of that state, which dates from 1836 when the republic of Texas was formed. After winning their independence from Mexico, the people of Texas decided upon a national flag, the most conspicuous feature of which was a single star. The present state flag of Texas consists of a blue perpendicular bar next to the staff, one-third the length of the flag, with a star of five points in the center. The other two-thirds of the flag is made up of two horizontal bars of equal width, the upper bar white and the lower one red. Much of the land of the state was given to homesteaders.

HOLD IDEAL HIGH

Worth-While Thoughts on Choosing a Husband.

According to Minister, Woman Must Demand That Man's Character Shall Be of the Best.

Let American girls of the present generation hold men to highest standards and the men will be raised to them accordingly, stated the Rev. Merritt Earl of the Homestead Methodist Episcopal church, Baltimore, in a recent sermon, "How to Choose a Husband."

"Never lower your ideal of the man you want to marry," he said. "Keep your standard high and we men will follow. One reason people claim that there are no good men today is because women do not expect, do not demand, the best that is in men. The worldly man, the spendthrift, the cigarette fiend, the dancer, the boozier, the self-styled 'perfect man' and numerous others are exiled from the candidate I would choose as a future mate were I the woman choosing. On the other hand, your future husband should be one whom you can trust and one whom you can love in spite of poverty, should poverty be your luck in married life."

"But how can I be sure he is the right man?" most young women ask today. To them I say, give the matter your utmost and careful consideration before taking the step. When the man makes the mistake in choosing the wrong mate he has his lodge room and club, both of which he usually works overtime. When she makes the mistake, only death can rectify it." Here is the preacher's warning:

"Never run after a man, and never marry to reform him. Let him fight to get you. If he doesn't think enough of you to marry you he's not worth the having. Reforming a man is a thankless job, so don't tackle it."

The requirements of the ideal husband, according to the Rev. Mr. Earl's list, are that he possess: 1. Good manners. 2. Gentility of soul. 3. Kindness. 4. Sympathy. 5. Industry. 6. Truthfulness. 7. Richness in character rather than richness in money. 8. A home builder.

And if you want to be certain your husband is "Mr. Right" who will make your life happy ever after, do not marry, says the Rev. Mr. Earl, the man who is: 1. Worldly. Temptations will get him some day and will wreck your matrimonial life, sooner or later. Shun him. 2. Shiftless. No wife can supply a man with backbone. He must be a live-wire and your bread winner. 3. A cigarette fiend. 4. A scoffer of religion. 5. A dancer. The fold-dent dancer educates his heels rather than his head. Avoid him. 6. A boozier. His habits will lead you to the almshouse. 7. The maker of excuses. Catch him in a lie and say good-night and good-bye before you marry him. 8. A spendthrift and gambler. You'll get the crust and be the bread.

"You smile and say this is a pretty high standard today," the preacher added. "But I tell you there are good men in this world. Don't be in too much of a hurry to marry and you will find one."

Reindeer Meat as Food.

Reindeer meat is said to be better than beef. And in the North the deer flourish. It is said that the meat will be eaten all over the United States in a few years. The federal government has been successful in raising herds of reindeer in Alaska. In 1902, 171 head were imported from Siberia. There are many herds at the present time, some of them numbering 20,000 heads. More than 100,000 have been killed for their meat and skins. Recently the Hudson's Bay company has leased 110,000 square miles of Arctic meadow land for the purpose of raising reindeer for a profit. Already Loman & Co., the largest private reindeer breeders in Alaska, have shipped several hundred carcasses to the United States. The muskox, too, a combination of the cow and sheep, also thrives in the North. Its flesh is tasty and nourishing.

Wiping Out Pests.

Many predatory animals are caught in their dens by government hunters, who are experienced and sufficiently fearless to work their way through narrow, dark tunnels and attack wolves, coyotes or mountain lions at close quarters. They usually get the adult female and a number of pups. Out of 1,791 animals taken in Montana during 1922 by predatory-animal hunters employed by the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state fish and game commission, 349 were taken in dens, 909 were trapped, 144 shot, 191 poisoned and 1 snared. Dogs were employed in taking 138. Skins and skulls of all the animals secured were turned in to the district office of the bureau as evidence of capture. The number included 1,544 coyotes, 55 bobcats, 56 wolves, 33 lions, 17 bears and 81 miscellaneous animals.

A Question of Antiquity.

As one of the tales of the great unwashed, it might be told that on one of the grimy windows of the Indiana statehouse is the following inscription:

"Sherman marched to the sea yesterday."

Inasmuch as the statehouse was built since the day after General Sherman ended his historic hike, it is believed that the inscription is the work of some wag and not that of a historian.—Indianapolis News.

Foundations.

Our own real good, and the good of our posterity, in some measure depends on the part we act; and it nearly concerns us to try our foundations impartially.—John Woolman's Journal.

CANVASSER SAW THE POINT

Finally Convinced That Housewife Was Supplied With All the "Music" She Needed.

He was a canvasser in the cheap musical instrument line, and was not easily discouraged. As he knocked at one door he remembered that he had called before, and had received a point-blank "No."

"Oh," remarked the lady of the house, "it's you again, is it? Come in, please."

Hopefully he accepted the invitation. Suddenly a door opened on his right, and he was ushered into a room full of howling children, who redoubled their efforts at the sight of a stranger.

The canvasser turned to find the door locked behind him. The woman went on with her washing, and an hour later returned to the room.

"Now," she remarked, sweetly, "if you still feel convinced that I require more music in the house you might call again."

The man has not been seen in that street since.

TRIBUTE TO GREAT ARCHITECT

Foremost Building Designers in England and America Honor Memory of Christopher Wren.

American architects observed the two hundredth anniversary of the death of Sir Christopher Wren, famous English astronomer and architect, who has left an indelible impression on American architecture.

Sir Christopher died in London February 25, 1723, and is buried in St. Paul's cathedral, which he planned.

The American observance was considered with the celebration in England, where the Royal Institute of British Architects set aside the entire week, beginning February 20, as commemoration week. A procession marched from the Mansion house to St. Paul's to hold memorial services in the cathedral, followed by a visit to the crypt, where the president of the Royal Institute laid a wreath on Wren's tomb.

In this country there is hardly a city that does not boast one or more Wren spires on its churches. The White House is distinctly Wren; the national capitol shows his influence; Independence hall, Philadelphia, with its palladium motif of one tall arch window flanked by square topped ones, is Wren. In Boston the state capitol, designed by Charles Bulfinch, who drew his inspiration from Wren, and the old South and North churches are among the notable Wren examples.

WHAT SHE THOUGHT

"You know he just cried for joy. Why, the tears were running down his cheeks and down mine, too."

Well, all I have to say is you must have been pretty close to him to have his tears run down your cheeks.

Switzerland Wants More Citizens.

Although the percentage of foreigners to the total population of Switzerland had fallen to 19.4 on December 1, 1920, from 14.7 per cent in 1910, the Swiss federal council is planning for the naturalization of some 12,000 foreigners a year, including about 5,000 persons born in Switzerland to mothers who were Swiss. According to reports from Rome found in German papers, these offspring of Swiss mothers are to be compelled to become Swiss citizens or leave the country.

Put Quietus on Curiosity.

A Toronto man escaped with a scratched face when his car and a truck loaded with dynamite collided in Hamilton. The coupe was thrown into the ditch, but escaped damage. The truck was also thrown into the ditch, badly smashed and the boxes of dynamite scattered about. The usual large crowd collected but melted just as quickly when it learned that the load was dynamite.

Wire Long in Cow's Throat.

A piece of steel wire six inches in length, with a hook on one end, which became embedded in the gullet, was removed from the throat of a cow in North Dorchester, Ont. The wire had been in the animal's throat for about nine months.

Unloading Cargoes by Hand.

Coolie labor is so cheap in China that modern freight handling machinery seen on the docks of this country and Europe has not been generally adopted. At some seaports of the Orient there is complete disregard for the number of men on one job, and as many as 20 dock laborers will be used on a comparatively small piece of freight.

Longest Word.

More than two months ago the "longest" word was stated in this column to be "antidisestablishmentarianism." Last week a reader in the West dug up a name to it. It's word is "antitranscendentalism." — GRL

TREASURE-HOUSE

I have a priceless treasure-house. All packed with things of worth. The memories of a busy life. Beginning with my birth; A faded rose, a yellowed note, A kerchief, and the white lace. An evening in the moonlight and The fragrance of a smile.

A fight to win—A pile of things Called Effort; and I see In every corner, glittering gifts Of golden parts of me. I sort them over, as a maid Might sort her thoughts of youth— And lingering here and there, I shed A foolish tear, forsooth!

Filled to the roof my treasure house!— And who am I to say Which of the treasures I shall prize And which shall throw away? For I must clear my treasure house Of useless things; must make More room, for better treasures need The room that trifles take.

Aha! I cannot clear my house! For everything I see Has something that is precious to The very soul of me! No, masons, carpenters, come quick! Come, hasten to my call! Build me a house that's wide and long A house to hold them all! —Richmond Times-Dispatch.

PAID TO GET VACCINATED

Large English Insurance Company Cut Rates for Those Inoculated During Ten-Year Period.

Business is reported to have no heart and no sentiment. Hence it is interesting to note how business regards vaccination against smallpox, remarks "Girard" in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

In England last year there were 902 cases of smallpox, of which only 27 were fatal. A large company which bears the reputation of insuring against any possible human contingency is now insuring in London, providing a financial indemnity for those stricken with smallpox for one year following the date the policy is written.

But the point of this matter of business is found in the rate charged. The rate for those who have been vaccinated during the last ten years is exactly half that charged persons who were never vaccinated.

There you have a measure of the financial value placed by cold-blooded directors on the efficacy of Jenner's great discovery.

Often have you read that this or that calamity had turned the hair white in a day—more frequently in a night.

Still oftener have you heard that a parent afflicted by the loss of a child, or a child by the loss of a parent, would lose his or her reason. In France they have been making a wholesale measurement to find out if the war increased insanity.

It didn't. And the measurement was made in northern France, which suffered all the direct as well as the indirect horrors of war. Even there insanity is now no more prevalent than in former normal times.

Japanese Good Dodgers.

Dispelling a popular illusion that Japanese mortality statistics have been swollen by reckless motor car drivers dashing through narrow streets crowded with children, the imperial department of home affairs has announced that in the past three and a half years only 135 persons have died as the results of motor car accidents in Japan, or about one to every 440,000 Japanese, and that the number of those hurt, but not killed, by motor cars has been only 1,458. Considering the congestion of Japanese cities, through which motorists are forced to drive, and the growing number of cars in the country (11,754, according to latest available figures), the percentage of accidents argues well both for the skill of the Japanese driver and the agility of the pedestrian.

Difference of Opinion.

Seeing that a friend had her neck bound up, I went up to her and sympathetically inquired how she happened to have such a sore throat.

She looked up surprised and said: "I have no sore throat. Why do you ask?"

Then I noticed that instead of a cloth, she had a great deal of lace draped—gracefully, she no doubt thought—around her neck. "Why," I stammered, blindly groping for an excuse, "I thought your voice was hoarse."—Exchange.

THOSE DEAR LADIES

"The idea of her saying that my hair was gray."

"Simply ridiculous! As if you'd buy gray hair."

Somewhat Kneatty Legal Point.

A London (Eng.) magistrate has had to decide whether a man is bound to maintain a wife who is capable of maintaining herself. For the husband it was contended that the wife was quite able to maintain herself in domestic service. The magistrate said that as a general proposition a husband is bound to maintain his wife, but supposing, as is frequently the case, a poor man marries a rich woman, he is surely not bound to maintain her. The magistrate adjourned the case for consideration.

That's an Idea.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

TOWHEE PAIR

"I have so many names," said little Mr. Towhee, "and so have you, my love."

"Yes, I'm a bird with many names. Another one of my names is 'Cheerful,' and some call me 'Towhee, please!'"

"That I call myself either Towhee or Cheerful just as you do, for you're my little mate."

"Oh," said Mrs. Towhee, "how we have puzzled people. They have heard you sing and they have heard you talk to me and they did not know which bird you were, for the people you have puzzled so have been city people."

"Through down around these parts for the first time this summer and they're much interested in us."

"It seems they know the Oven Bird family. The Oven Birds say 'Towhee, Towhee' over and over again, but we say 'Cheerful, please!' and I think they really know us now."

"Yes," said Mr. Towhee, "they know now when I sing a loud and clear 'Towhee-ow!' and 'Towhee-ow-ow-ow,' with the last notes very tremulous and with all of our song very, very clear."

"When we call, we call a clear, sharp 'cheerful!'. Yes, it sounds just like that—very clear and very sharp."

"Three lovely notes and a tremolo in our last song, however. Do you remember, little mate, how I used to sing that song to you when you were sitting on your nest and when I would perch myself in your trees?"

"Indeed I remember it," said Mrs. Towhee.

"I used to sing for long stretches at a time, too," said Mr. Towhee.

"And I enjoyed it so much," said Mrs. Towhee.

"Yes," said Mr. Towhee, "I always loved to sing in the early morning and even on into the evening. The morning is so fresh and clear and bright and sunny and lovely a time."

"Of course I liked singing when it grew later in the afternoon, too, and even on the rainy days I enjoyed singing."

"I still love all those times, too."

"And at all those times I love to listen," said Mrs. Towhee.

"How we do love the swamps and the wooded places," said Mr. Towhee.

"We Like to Scratch About."

"And you look just like the worms yourself, dear Mrs. Towhee."

"You match the leaves to perfection and your dress is so simple and so becoming."

"I am glad that it pleases you," said Mrs. Towhee, "but your costume pleases me. I like your black and white and brown costume."

"Your white touches look so lovely when you fly. Your brown feet are so well shaped!"

"Your eyes are so beautiful and such a handsome shade of red, and your legs are so strong and so fine and glossy a shade of black."

"We have the same tastes. We both love to be around on the ground. We like to scratch about among the leaves."

"And our nest we like to have on the ground. Mine of bark and leaves and grasses was the finest home ever a bird had, and the white eggs with the reddish dots hatched into such dear little birds."

"You have a white-eyed relative, I believe, but red is so much more manly than a color."

"Sometimes you're taken for a robin because the brown touches on your parts are so reddish in shade."

"But you're not really alike. You are smaller and I'm smaller still and there is an olive shade to my costume which is unlike the costume of a robin."

"But of course in speaking of our names we should mention that sometimes we're called ground robins and sometimes towhee linnets and sometimes towhee ground finches and sometimes towhee ground finches and sometimes towhee ground finches."

"We belong to the Finch family, and a fine family it is. We cannot help but be proud of the family to which we belong."

"Ah, we had a pleasant little chat but now we must be looking for earthworms and insects with perhaps a few berries for dessert," said Mr. Towhee.

"I must admit I'm getting hungry."

"And now that you speak of it I realize I am too," said Mrs. Towhee.

"Yes, we must have a good dinner, for our breakfast was rather slight this morning."

"Ah, that is the reason why I feel so very hungry," said Mr. Towhee.

"Now I understand the reason for my great hunger. I always like to feel that there is a reason," he ended with a twinkle in his eye.

GAS BUGGIES—It Doesn't Sound Well—No Matter What You Say

The KITCHEN CABINET

(By 1922 Western Newspaper Union)

I have loved the feel of the grass under my feet, and the sound of running streams by my side. The hum of the wind in the tree tops has always been good music to me, and the face of the fields has often comforted me more than the face of man.—John Burroughs.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

A crisp green salad is always agreeable and when served with the following dressing is quite nourishing:

Thousand Island Dressing.—Put into a small bowl for one-half cupful of olive oil, the juice of half a lemon and half an orange, a teaspoonful of onion juice, one-fourth teaspoonful each of cayenne pepper and salt, one teaspoonful of Worcester's sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard, three sprigs of parsley, chopped fine. Put on the rubber and cover and shake vigorously. Green pepper chopped may be added, and some enjoy the acid slightly softened by the addition of a teaspoonful of powdered sugar.

Barbecue of Porterhouse.—Have a cut of porterhouse cut about three and one-half inches thick and containing a good piece of tenderloin. Trim into shape, removing most of the fat and leaving a thin layer. Mix two tablespoons of oil and white pepper with a little cayenne, add to these four tablespoons of cream, butter and rub the mixture well into the meat on both sides and edges. Place on a grate over a gas and set under the gas flame. Have two tablespoons of olive oil mixed with one teaspoonful of Worcester's sauce and brush the steak every five minutes with this mixture, reducing the heat after the surface of the steak is seared. Cook forty-five minutes. The brush should be dipped into the drip from the pan after the juice of the steak has begun to drip. Rub with more mustard with the moistened brush, just before it goes to the table.

Barbecued Mutton.—Make a sauce by melting two tablespoons of butter to this add the juice of half a good-sized lemon, one-quarter cupful of currant jelly, one-quarter teaspoonful of prepared mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of cayenne and one teaspoonful of grated orange peel. Reheat the thin slices of mutton in this sauce. Serve steaming hot; but do not cook.

Historic St. James.

St. James' palace in London was formerly the royal residence. It was founded by Henry VIII and dedicated to St. James. After the destruction of Whitehall by fire in 1697 it became the chief residence of the reigning sovereign of England, and for that reason the English court was referred to as the court of St. James. After her accession in 1837, Queen Victoria moved the royal household to Buckingham Palace, but until the death of the prince consort in 1861 she held levees and drawing rooms at St. James.

She Had a Pretty Good Idea.

"Ah, madam," said the pious visitor, "I am going about giving advice and consolation to unhappy wives. Do you know where your husband is every night?" "Indeed, I do," "Ah, madam, you think not, do he may be here, there, anywhere." "Well, if he goes out of the place where he is now, he has to raise a granite slab that weighs a ton, and when he is alive he couldn't lift a souther of coal."

Name American Girl to Head School for Nurses in Warsaw

Miss Amelia Greenwald

It was not so many years ago that most of the minor surgical operations in America were performed by barbers. The red spiral barber poles are a present relic of their past advertisements as blood-letters. And in those days the nurses were elderly women whose scientific knowledge consisted largely of good intentions. In some villages in Poland the barbers are still the doctors and there are few nurses available for any but the very rich.

An American girl is going to change this. She is to leave shortly to open a nursing school in Warsaw and spread the gospel of health and sanitation where it is pitifully needed. The American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee has appropriated $50,000 for the establishment of a school for nurses and chosen Miss Amelia Greenwald as its head. She is a graduate of Tufts University in North Carolina, and has taken post graduate courses at Johns Hopkins and public health work at the Teachers' College. She spent a year and a half at Base Hospital No. 3 in Savenay, France, during the war.

The Committee, whose work is non-sectarian, has been for two years aiding local Polish societies engaged in work for the sick, and has provided drugs and medicines for their use. Now it is undertaking to train young Polish girls as real nurses and is hopeful that soon at least one real trained nurse can be assigned to each town, not only to serve the sick but to teach the young people the fundamentals of public health knowledge.

The nurse's school will not only teach modern nursing methods but help its graduates to establish baby health stations and do the sanitary work that is so much the part of every American city.

COLONIALS WIN IN CLOSE GAME

From Pittsfield Professionals by a 3-2 Score—Borgman Knocks in Winning Run—Culliton Strikes Out Eighteen—No Errors for Colonials.

If the fan will think back to April 15 he will remember that on that date there was a game played in this city between the Colonials and the Red Hook team in which two heroes were brought to light. These heroes were Benny Borgman and Bud Culliton.

On Sunday, May 13, there was a game played here between the Colonials and the Pittsfield Professionals which the Colonials won by a 3-2 score and in which again Benny and Bud were again the heroes. For was it not Borgman who, with the score tied in the last half of the ninth, sent a hard hit two batters into left field and drove McCue in home with the winning run. Furthermore was it not Bud Culliton who struck out eighteen of the Pittsfield players during the course of the afternoon's proceedings and allowed these same players only five safe hits.

It was one of the best ball games played in this city this year. The Colonial players seem to have found themselves again and they were not credited with one error throughout the entire game. Borgman was playing his last game with the Kingston team as he has signed up with the Chester, Pa. team, which plays semi-pro ball every night in the week. Because of his exhibitions in recent games some of the fans thought that the diminutive short stop had lost his batting eye. However, he demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of these fans Sunday that he was not as he succeeded in winning three hits out of five at bat which is considered a good afternoon's work.

The Colonials scored their first run of the afternoon in the third inning of the game when McCue decided that although he had already entitled himself to one hit that two would not be out of the way and so as a result he let one go over the left field fence which figured decidedly in the final outcome of the game.

In the fourth the Colonials succeeded in annexing another run. Murray let go one of his wild pitches which scraped Dunn and sent him along to first base. Then Bill Schuch decided that it was time for him to come through with a hit and a result he let go a two bagger which placed Dunn on third and in a very brief position to score. Dunn, however, on third seemed to fluster Murray, the man with the side arm delivery, somewhat, and while in this dazed state he let go another uncontrolled ball which struck in front of the plate and momentarily scared Dunn.

After this everything settled down and the game went along peacefully until the sixth inning when it again became as rough as the fourth. The Colonials were going to get at least one more run in the sixth. However, the Professionals decided that they were going to go all out and they upped a Colonial rally right in the bud. Freeman was sent to first on a bunt, Freeman went to second on Dunn's single. Freeman popped up with Schuch's ground ball and a result Schuch received first and the other two open second and third respectively which killed the bases with one down. However that was as it was as the Colonials got to smiling as Dunn was forced out at home when McCue had grounded and Calman pulled in Calman's result which put an end to the proceedings for that inning at least.

The sixth inning was the real turning point of the day. In this inning two singles and two free hits for first base scored two runs for the Colonials and tied the score at two apiece. The inning ended with a dramatic play. Freeman popped up and Calman pulled in Calman's result which put an end to the proceedings for that inning at least.

Then the Professionals came back in their turn at the bat and scored the winning run in the seventh. The Colonials were going to get at least one more run in the seventh. However, the Professionals decided that they were going to go all out and they upped a Colonial rally right in the bud. Freeman was sent to first on a bunt, Freeman went to second on Dunn's single. Freeman popped up with Schuch's ground ball and a result Schuch received first and the other two open second and third respectively which killed the bases with one down. However that was as it was as the Colonials got to smiling as Dunn was forced out at home when McCue had grounded and Calman pulled in Calman's result which put an end to the proceedings for that inning at least.

It was a very close game and a very exciting one for the fans.

The following is a summary of the game:

	Pittsfield	Colonials
Runs	2	3
Hits	10	12
Errors	1	0
Left on Base	8	5
Strikes Out	18	5
Home Runs	0	1
Doubles	0	1
Singles	10	10
Batters Faced	30	28
Umpire	W. J. ...	W. J. ...

Arthur Kingsland

Arthur Kingsland, a New York City resident, has recently come to light. This ancient church, with its tall spire and tower, erected in the fourth century was the life work of an abbot of Rome who died, however, before it was completed. A legend was handed down that the abbot on his deathbed requested that his heart should be buried in the walls and that it was done. The legend came to the hearing of a certain of Frising responsible at Yale and he determined to investigate its truth. He had all the walls carefully sounded, with the result that a hollow place was found in the wall of the chancel. An opening was made, revealing a cavity in which was found a small brown box, containing a little mummified dust—proof that the pious father's wish had been faithfully observed.

Strange Find in a Church.

A romantic fact in connection with the building of the ten church of Exeter, England, has recently come to light. Buddha and the Criminal.

A legend of Buddha tells how the god once meted the realm of darkness where the wicked lay. There he saw a criminal, loaded with fetters, and without hope of release, for he had committed a crime which could not be forgiven. With a smile which illumined all the vast emptying darkness, the "Giver of Light" turned to show the criminal saw, hanging from above, a single thread of goodness. The thread spun by a spider. Seizing it frantically, the poor wretch found, to his surprise, that the light thread was yet strong enough to bear his full weight and enable him to climb from the pit of darkness up to the realm of light.

POLAND'S CAPITAL

Under the Vistula Bridge in Warsaw.

(Presented by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)
 A Polish map or handbook would tell you that the land of the Poles is Rzeczpospolita Polska, and that its capital is Warszawa—a fact which goes to show that there is sometimes justification for our habit of dubbing other countries' place names by our own pseudonyms.

Warsaw is forever being compared to Paris, and rightly. The southernness and heaviness and matter-of-factness often found in the great cities of Germany and Russia and England have always been lacking in Warsaw. Even a century of oppression could not entirely break the Polish spirit of gaiety and optimism nor alter greatly the results this spirit had wrought in fashioning the Polish capital.

To carry the comparison further, the Parisians are lovers of beauty, and so are the people of Warsaw. It is significant that the Polish President who recently was assassinated was attacked at an art exhibition. The presence of the Polish chief executive on such an occasion makes as true a picture as a French president at a new theater, a British king at a board of trade or a financial congress, or a President of the United States dedicating a great engineering work.

Finally Warsaw may be compared to Paris in some ways upon the score of physical arrangement and appearance. The city is filled with impressive old cathedrals, churches and palaces, and has numerous stately public buildings. Wide, tree-lined boulevards radiate from the old city center, some leading to beautiful and most elaborately developed parks. But Warsaw is not wholly a city of wide avenues and open spaces. It has its ancient portion of narrow, tortuous streets, whose darkness and quietness take one back to the Middle Ages.

Warsaw's history is both long and turbulent. It had its beginnings in the Ninth century; and its start, like that of many other great cities of Europe, was around the castle of a feudal lord. In 1550 it became the capital of the then powerful Polish kingdom, and has since played a role of importance in European history. Inevitably it grew to be a great city and inevitably it felt the hand of numerous conquerors. For geographical position marked it as one of the greatest of European centers.

Has Strategic Trade Position.
 One feels that, like the lines of force about a magnet, Warsaw's lines of trade must have existed from the first, though invisible. Now they have taken shape in steel and wood; railroads extending from the city like spokes of a great wheel, off toward Petrograd, Moscow, Odessa, Vienna, Prague, Berlin and Danzig. In a Europe at peace it would occupy much the position of St. Louis in the United States, though reversed as to directions, lying in a strategic position between the raw materials and foodstuffs of the East and the factories and consumers of the West; and at the same time helping to exchange products between the North and the South. In addition Warsaw is itself an important manufacturing center. Its trade and industry and politics together have built up a population close to the million mark, making it one of the half dozen greatest cities of the European mainland.

The country of which Warsaw is the capital must not be looked upon as one of the "little lands" that spring into existence after the World War. It is more than half as large as Texas, and has a population six times as great. To put it more emphatically, Poland's population is practically a quarter that of the United States.

Situated half-way between Petrograd, which may be taken as representing the north, and Venice on the warm Mediterranean, Warsaw is probably thought of usually as in temperate latitudes. It is in reality as far north as the southern coast of Hudson Bay or the northern coast of Newfoundland. Its winter, however, is not as severe as the location might suggest, but it is more nearly comparable to that of New England.

He who wanders about the streets of Warsaw cannot remain in ignorance of the glorious past of Poland or the

HAVE FIRM FAITH IN DEMONS

Tribe of Lower Burma Embrace All Sorts of Devices to Overcome Their Malignancy.

To the Karens, in Lower Burma, the great banian trees, the caves and waterfalls, deep pools in the rivers and even the skies, are filled with mysterious demons. Bamboo "ladders" are set up for the demon inhabitants of trees, and the paths about a hill village are strewn with rolls of cotton, trays of colored rice balls, live chickens, bits of eggshell and other tempting offerings to induce the demons to forego their evil designs on the villagers. When they gather to feast in honor of the "bhaga," or family spirits, the young women of the hill tribes wear the effective seed-trimmed smock in which they work in the fields. But on the plains the Karen girls are adopting black velvet jackets in place of the seed-trimmed smock, the minor native girls are being forsaken for the music of the West, and houses are built on the solid ground, as are those of the neighboring Burmese. Only in the solitudes of the hills, far away from external influences, do the ancient Karen costumes still prevail.

CITY HAS CHANGED LITTLE

Modern Bagdad Remains Much as It Was in the Days of Harun-al-Rashid.

Many a school child who has read the "Arabian Nights' Entertainment," and can relate the nocturnal adventures of Harun-al-Rashid in ancient Bagdad, never heard of the star worshippers of the present-day kingdom of Irak, in the traditional land of Eden and Ararat. And yet these strange people are just as picturesque. They turn to the north star to pray, must be baptized every Sunday, and have a sacred book which they can begin at either end and read toward the middle. Modern Bagdad differs little from old Bagdad. Here one must become accustomed to interminable mud walls more monotonous than any standard rows of houses, narrow and mainly deserted thoroughfares, dogs always underfoot, and only moon and starlight to guide the way at night.

His Doubtful Status.

"There's a feller stopping here who says he is from Kansas City," related the landlady of the tavern at Jimpsonton Junction. "But I believe, myself, he is lying about it."
 "What makes you say that?" asked one of the loungers.
 "Why, he also says he had never been held up or shot, or anything of the sort. My notion is that he is really from somewhere else and is hiding out from somebody."—Kansas City Star.

President Harding and Secretary Mellon Congratulate Savings Directors on Recent Sales of Government Securities

Washington, D. C.—(Special)—Getting people to save and invest their money is no longer the "hardest job in the world," at least so say the Government's Savings Directors, who have been instrumental in rolling up over $125,000,000 in sales of Treasury Savings Certificates so far this year. We should judge that no one is more pleased over the results than Captain Lew Wallace, Jr., the national Director of Savings, who stands on the President's right.
 Each Director is responsible for the Treasury's Savings activities in one of the twelve Federal Reserve Districts. Notable service has been rendered by these men, not only in cultivating the idea of systematic saving, but in making Treasury Savings Certificates, which are peculiarly suited to people unfamiliar with investment matters, a most popular security. Confidence in these Certificates has been much to protect people against the operations of fraudulent stock promoters. The fact that Treasury Savings Certificates can conveniently be purchased at local Post Offices, where adds to their popularity. They are issued in three denominations, $25, $100 and $1,000 and are sold at discount basis at $20.50, $92 and $950 respectively. They run for 20 years at the end of which time, principal and interest are paid in one lump sum. They are registered in the Treasury's name at Washington and are protected by the Government against loss of any kind.

The Coil of Circumstance

Taken from the Notebook of an Old Detective
by Charles Edmonds Walk
And With Names and Places Hidden Published as a Proof That Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction

This story throbs with realism in the words' narrowest meaning. It is a faithful rendering of an authentic experience in the career of a high official of a detective agency whose name is a household word throughout the English-speaking world. Real names of persons and places are sometimes disguised. In all other respects the amazing, often thrilling, always gripping facts are recorded just as they happened.

One morning in August, when Felix Hazard was as yet only a capable operative of the Sutherland Detective Agency, he was summoned to the office of his chief, where he was surprised at being confronted by one of the guiding spirits of the city's banking and commercial activities—Mr. Howard Kendal. Only within the week had the name come to occupy an unenviable notoriety in the newspapers and the public mind, by reason of its close association with a particularly atrocious murder.

Following an annual custom, the Kendals and most of their establishment had gone to their summer home, near Harbor Springs, Michigan. During these summertime holidays their Lake Shore mansion was left in charge of the housekeeper, a middle-aged widow of education and refinement, who had long been a trusted servant of the Kendal ménage; as a matter of fact, her position was more like a member of the family than of merely a servant. This lady's name was Mrs. Constance Fleuroy—or "Connie," as she was affectionately called by members of the family.

Felix Hazard immediately surmised the object of the millionaire's visit. Early in the morning of Thursday, August 21, Mrs. Fleuroy's lifeless body was found by a grocer's solicitor and other tradesmen at the Lake Shore home. They had reasons for believing her to be in the house, and when repeated ringing of the door bell and a final recourse to the telephone elicited no response, they were filled with alarm. After some debate one of the party assumed the responsibility of forcing an entrance to investigate.

Their apprehensions were amply justified. Mrs. Fleuroy was discovered lying quite dead and cold at the foot of the principal staircase, clad only in a nightgown, over which she had thrown a kimono and a pair of comfortable "mules."

That she had been the victim of a brutal murder the most cursory glance was sufficient to determine. Upon the floor near the body was found a bronze statuette, a replica of the familiar "Winged Victory," which was perhaps twenty inches in height and very heavy. It manifestly had been snatched from its pedestal and used with deadly purpose, as clots of blood and wisps of the dead woman's hair were yet clinging to it, as well as the bruised and battered condition of the body itself mutely testified.

Discoveries began to crop up at the very beginning of the police examination to incriminate Mr. Kendal's nephew, Howard Gentry, a young man of twenty-two.

That so many tradesmen chanced to be present at a time when the house was ostensibly closed was accounted for by the proprietor of a neighborhood delicatessen, whose statement was corroborated by the others.

On the previous day (Wednesday) Mr. Fleuroy had received a letter from Mr. Kendal announcing that his nephew, Howard Gentry, had returned to America after a long sojourn abroad, and was expected to arrive in Chicago on the day the letter came to her hands. She was instructed to open the house, prepare a specified slice of rooms for Howard's entertainment and notify the tradesmen that the family would curtail their vacation and follow shortly.

This letter was found in Mrs. Fleuroy's room.

It also contained two other details of interest, which the housekeeper did not confide to the tradesmen, namely, that Howard would make himself known through the medium of a letter written to him by Mr. Kendal, the obvious inference being that Mrs. Fleuroy personally did not know the young man.

The second detail was found in a transcript appended by a feminine hand, presumably Margaret Kendal's, who was twenty-two and the millionairess's only child. It attested that Howard's engagement to a Miss Gladys Rutherford, whom he had met abroad, had been announced, and that he had returned to America in contemplation of the wedding.

Several sheets of the letter to young Gentry from his uncle were discovered in the bedroom occupied by him at least a part of the fatal night. This was the letter that served to identify the young man to Mrs. Fleuroy. It was unquestionably written in the millionaire's characteristic hand, suggesting that there was no typewritten counterpart.

Numerous references and allusions contained therein made it clear that the nephew had carried on a considerable period of time. But the most significant feature, aside from the presence of the letter itself, was an attention to the effect that $20,000 had been placed in the library safe—and there the sheet broke off, the remaining page or pages being missing.

And then, on top of this accumulation of circumstantial evidence, Gentry had disappeared, nor could the police or his friends discover the slightest trace of his whereabouts.

The safe was small, but a substantial modern affair, and it had been blown open with "sawp" in recognized "peter-man" fashion. If it had contained $20,000 or any other amount, or anything of value at all, both money and valuables had vanished before the police arrived upon the scene.

The sole theory upon which the police were working, naturally enough, was that Gentry blew the safe, and the noise having awakened Mrs. Fleuroy, she stole down the main stairs and surprised him in the act of looting the money-drawer. Thereupon the burglar snatched up the statuette, the nearest available weapon, and in a twinkling became a red-handed murderer. He then had made good his escape.

Although Felix Hazard was acquainted with the published accounts of the crime, he wanted to hear the story from Mr. Kendal's own lips. Before departing, however, he supplied certain details not contained in the published report.

"Some time on Wednesday, the twentieth," Mr. Kendal averred, "Howard presented himself at the house and gave Mrs. Fleuroy my letter. A sheet or two of it was found by the police. But the portion of it that would explain away the very worst feature against Howard has not come to light. As a matter of fact, if you had the entire letter you would see at once that it constituted strong evidence in his favor. I will explain.

"His purpose in coming to Chicago was twofold—to visit me and my family, and to approve of my choice of a piece of property that was to be my wedding present to him and his wife. For this purpose I had drawn on my bank for $20,000. The bargain was too good a one to risk any chance of somebody else stepping in and snatching it up. So I informed him in the same letter that the money had been sent to the house to be placed in the library safe by Mrs. Fleuroy subject to his demand.

"Now then, somebody—God knows it was not Howard; he never could have done such a thing—somebody during the night of the twentieth forced the safe door and took not only the money, but certain of my wife's and daughter's jewels, which were not in my safe-deposit box; most priceless heirlooms that we always keep by us, but none the less intrinsically worth thousands of dollars.

"A description of these has been furnished the police. Among the missing trinkets are three one-dollar gold pieces whose dates I remember—1877, 1870 and 1881.

"There was no sign that the house had been broken into; but next morning Howard was missing and has been ever since; it's four days now. Why was he not there to prevent the dastardly crime, or at least to give the alarm?

Both Felix Hazard and his chief remained discreetly silent in the face of this outburst, and in a moment the harassed old gentleman continued.

"Now I want you to consider this: Howard did not have to force my safe nor commit murder to obtain the $20,000; Constance had received explicit instructions to give it to him whenever he asked for it. As for the stolen jewels, they did not offer a sufficient additional inducement for him to have resorted to the graver crime. Besides, while not a man of affluence, my nephew enjoys a substantial income; he has always lived within it, and the girl he is engaged to marry is well-to-do in her own right. There is positively no motive that implicates Howard in this crime.

"I want you to find him—find him before the police do—and try to get from him the information that will clear him. Spare no expense."

"How about this young lady to whom Mr. Gentry is engaged?" Felix Hazard inquired. "Can she throw any light upon the matter—where he now is, for instance?"

"No, none at all. She absolutely refuses to talk about it further than to maintain an unshakable belief in his innocence."

Hazard's eyes narrowed; but he didn't press this phase except to get Miss Gladys Rutherford's address.

him enter, opened the door and went in.

At a desk sat a girl, whose striking individuality, whose cool, self-possessed poise at once would have impressed one. Furthermore, and aside from her attractive personality, she was a remarkably pretty girl, with wide, calm gray eyes, a wealth of wavy chestnut hair, and a beautiful transparency of complexion that betokened perfect health.

This was Miss Helen Bertel, one of the Sutherlands' most valued operatives. She looked up inquiringly as Hazard entered, and waited for him to speak.

"Helen," said he, "are you too busy to help me in a little matter?"

The girl sighed resignedly and laid aside several typewritten sheets which she had been perusing.

"Do I have to go anywhere?" she asked.

"Not unless you want to. Perhaps it can excite your professional zeal sufficiently to endure the ordeal of co-operating with me."

For the first time since his entrance the immobility of her handsome face was broken. She wrinkled her nose and stuck out the tip of her tongue at him.

Rapidly she sketched the Fleuroy case and explained young Gentry's entanglement therewith. In conclusion she told her what he wanted her to do.

"See Miss Gladys Rutherford, and learn if you can whether she is keeping back anything concerning Gentry. All I know about her is—"

"Not much, of course," Helen interrupted with a grand air; "you lack my superior advantages. Her father has oodles and oodles of money, and her name is in the society columns every day. The family resides in Hyde Park."

"Well, use your own judgment as to how you shall approach her; but learn everything about Gentry that you can. I'll wait till I hear from you before I try to do anything."

The afternoon was pretty well advanced when Miss Bertel returned from her mission. She went immediately to Felix Hazard's room and seated herself opposite him with his table desk between them.

"When," she asked, "did Howard Gentry arrive in Chicago?"

"I thought I'd told you. It was Wednesday."

"You are mistaken. It was Tuesday night. That detail is the one bit of information that Miss Gladys Rutherford can add to the case. On Tuesday night he telephoned her that, as the hour was late, he was putting up at the Palmer house, and that he would see her at ten the following morning. Since then she has heard nothing from him and all her attempts to get into communication with him have failed. She is beside herself with anxiety."

An appreciable pause signified Hazard's puzzlement, then he spoke.

"Might it not be she who is mistaken?" he began; but Helen's decisive negative headshake checked him.

"No," she added; "she loves him."

"I suppose," he said presently, "we can't find anybody at the Palmer house at this time of night who can on duty late Tuesday night; we'll possibly have to wait ourselves till to-night to learn anything there. Anyhow, his arrival Tuesday night instead of Wednesday may be of no particular significance. Want to go over to the detective bureau and find out whether the dicks over there know anything worth while?"

"I'm wild yuh," mimicked the girl. "Besides, I may still prove useful. Miss Rutherford supplied me with a list of every address in Chicago she could think of where Mr. Gentry might be likely to have business or likely to call for any reason."

"Good girl! I never thought of that." His approval was so fervent that Helen breathed a deep sigh, and with mock demureness asked:

"Dear Felix, whatever in the world would become of you were it not for me?"

To which he replied in sober earnestness:

"Heaven alone knows."

Arrived at the detective bureau, their first inquiry was for fingerprints. None had been discovered; but an accurate description of the stolen jewels and coins was obtained.

"Why are you coming in on this case?" the detective sergeant demanded of Hazard—meaning, by the pronoun, the Sutherlands.

Hazard regarded him speculatively. In a moment he smiled pleasantly.

"To see that there is no miscarriage of justice. It's a serious matter, you know."

The other was frankly suspicious and skeptical, and expressed his doubt of the good faith of Hazard's intentions by a grunt.

"Well, don't forget," warned the detective sergeant, "we have the Indian sign hung on that young swell; he's our meat."

"I'll not forget," was Hazard's smiling reply, "that you say so."

As he and Helen left the detective bureau and proceeded south in La Salle street, the girl observed:

"One thing sure: the police really haven't the slightest idea where Howard Gentry is."

"No, they haven't. And they are afraid we'll tax him before they do." His chin face widened in a grin. "It would be a joke if they didn't know what to do with him—if they do make the pinch."

"What do you mean?"

"I've an idea the young man can keep them guessing. Right now, though, it looks pretty dark for him; yet there is one factor in his favor that made me say what I just did."

"It is: he was not obliged to frisk his uncle's safe to get the $20,000—if his uncle didn't tell that simply to shield him."

"Or," appended Helen, "there may be something behind this affair that forces him to remain under cover. Something unforeseen may have turned up unexpectedly that caused him to make a hurried getaway."

"We haven't a hint of anything of the kind yet. . . . We might as well go round to the Palmer house. It's a bit early for the night force, but we might pick up something."

As Hazard had guessed, they did not see any of the night clerks who might have remembered Howard Gentry, but instead one of the young men on duty.

As soon as he heard the nature of their errand and who Felix Hazard and Miss Bertel were, he beckoned to the day house detective, who at that instant was crossing the lobby.

Immediately the circumstance that Howard Gentry had arrived Tuesday night instead of Wednesday was confirmed. Then, as an interesting addendum to this, the clerk averred that about 7:30 o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, the twentieth, a man had applied at the desk to see Gentry on a matter of pressing importance. In a few minutes the man was invited up to Gentry's room. Shortly the young man, accompanied by the stranger, came down in one of the elevators and went hurriedly away. Neither had been since seen about the hotel.

"See Miss Gladys Rutherford, and learn if you can whether she is keeping back anything concerning Gentry. All I know about her is—"

"Not much, of course," Helen interrupted with a grand air; "you lack my superior advantages. Her father has oodles and oodles of money, and her name is in the society columns every day. The family resides in Hyde Park."

"I'll not forget," was Hazard's smiling reply, "that you say so."

"As long as it will take me to phone Levin's pool room and pass the word for him to come in. That's his hangout, you know. What's the hurry?"

"Go ahead, then, and do it. I have a hunch that he knows a whole lot about the Fleuroy murder."

The officer studied him an instant, as he reached slowly for his desk instrument.

"I'll do it," he acquiesced without enthusiasm; "but what's the use? We know pretty much all we need to about that case."

"What do you mean?" Hazard quickly demanded.

Helen's eyes took on a more alert look, because she was beginning to see the drift of her companion's hypothesis and could not understand McInerney's manner.

The captain finished with the telephone and shored it away from him. Said he:

"Purcell hasn't been at his old hangout today."

"I know he wouldn't be," Hazard bravely broke in. "Get him, cap, before he makes a clean getaway."

"Oh, we can get him if necessary. But I ask: what's the use? Not more than twenty minutes ago the man who did the killing was brought in."

Hazard could not restrain a start. He and Helen exchanged surprised glances.

"You mean Gentry?" he demanded.

"I mean Gentry. Right now he's sleeping off as beautiful a jag as you ever laid your two eyes on. And if you are interested in the sort of company he keeps, he was found in a room up over this same Levin's."

Again Hazard's eyes gleamed. Both he and Helen relaxed from their strained attitude and the latter appeared to lose interest.

"Go on, cap," Hazard softly urged, "you interest me strangely."

"Well, if you need any further evidence that he's the man, we found it on him—the three gold dollars taken from Kendal's safe."

Helen interposed. Said she: "I have very good reasons for believing that Mr. Gentry is not a drinking man. A man's fancies are pretty good authority on that score."

McInerney shrugged his shoulders. "You have only to look at him to learn how mistaken a man's fancies may be." He turned to Hazard.

"Want to see him?" he asked.

Hazard signified that he did; but Helen was indifferent, having no inclination to view the prisoner.

Hazard was shown to a cell where a tall, well-knit young fellow lay stretched upon an iron cot. He appeared to be in a drunken stupor. His handsome, refined face was marked by a ghastly pallor, his black hair was rumpled, and from time to time he moaned and stirred uneasily in his sleep.

Suddenly Hazard leaned over the sleeper and sniffed. At once the dubious expression cleared from his face, and in another instant he was back in McInerney's office.

"It's Gentry all right," he assured Helen. Then, to the police captain: "Say, don't you boys know the difference between raw whisky and whiskey that's been drugged? You'd better call a doctor. The booze is on the young fellow's clothes, not his breath."

"Send out the word for 'Gy' Purcell, cap. There's been a rotten plant here that you fellows are blind to, and it's more important than ever that you get him. Stick him in solitary to rest in condition to be worked on tomorrow."

He and Helen returned to the Sutherlands, and an hour or so later they were informed that Purcell had been brought in and that Gentry had in a measure recovered his sober senses, though he was still dazed and unsteady.

Five minutes later Felix Hazard was again in the young man's cell. The talk lasted until long after nightfall, at which time the detective left.

The early hours of the following forenoon Hazard spent with McInerney.

"What are your objections to me as a non-lawyer?"

"To tell you the truth," replied Mr. Cumrox, "I haven't any serious objections. I may seem a little reluctant. But if you get into our family and don't like us, I don't want you to blame me."

"To get eggs in abundance, it is necessary not only to place feed in the hen house but to get it into the hen's crop in the right proportion for manufacture of eggs."

POULTRY

MAKE SUCCESS WITH GEESSE

Geese Month Old Are Hardest of Fowls—Gross in Ration Is Most Important.

After geese are a month old they are among the hardest of fowls, but they are rather delicate at first and should have careful attention. The main thing is to keep them warm and dry the first few weeks, feeding them a little at a time and often—say four or five times a day. One of the best rations on which to start geese is a mixture of corn meal and shorts, mixed with bread or cracker crumbs, hard boiled eggs chopped fine, etc.

It is also a good plan to provide some tender grass as a relish right from the start. The goose is essentially a grazing bird, hence grass in its ration is quite important at all times. Other grain food, along with meat scraps, should be added to the ration gradually as the geese grow.

Most people keep geese in small movable runs for the first two weeks, so they can't run wild but can be moved to fresh ground each day where they can pick grass and bugs. The extent of this ranging space can be gradually increased until the geese are a month old, then they should be turned out on free range where they will find lots of pasturage to make rapid growth.

Geese do not have to have water to swim in, but at the same time they get lots of enjoyment from it. If a small stream or pond cannot be provided, then it is quite essential that the fowls have an abundant supply of good drinking water, which they consume freely.

After geese are turned on pasture, if the grass is in good condition, it is not necessary to feed them grain more than twice a day at first and later once a day. The first object should be to get as large a growth of frame as possible. Let fat come last.

To build frame requires lots of grass, bugs and worms, and grains like oats and buckwheat that are not especially fattening.

As fall approaches and the grass begins to fall, corn should be substituted for one of the other grains as it is more fattening. Starting at least a month before the holiday selling season, the geese we want to sell on market are fed all they will eat of a mixture of corn and oats at first and corn alone later. In fitting geese for market it is hardly possible to make them too fat, as extreme fatness has no bad effect upon their table qualities and therefore most people want lots of it.—Farm Life.

Geese and chickens do not breed very successfully together. As is well known, geese like to dig around in the dirt and then wash their faces in every puddle of water that is placed in the yard for the poultry. The geese will soon empty the puddle by dipping their heads deeply in the water and throwing it over their backs with the pails contain only a few inches of dirty water. A steady supply of clean water is important for growing chickens as the geese become a nuisance in the enclosure.

Geese will often drive the poultry away from the dry mash hoppers. As the profit in geese depends on raising them on a cheap ration largely composed of grass it does not pay to feed them much mash during the summer.

The best place for geese is a field near a pond. This gives the birds plenty of water. They do not need a body of water but it saves the work of carrying a lot of drinking water if the geese have their own supply for washing in.

Chicks in the last of receiving food, fresh mash each day, are very apt to develop some digestive troubles if old mash—mash that is beginning to turn—is given them.

Americans are raising more poultry every year. Farmers may get that the better department is about the most profitable. Start with a standard breed rooster and breed up the flock.

Lack of space is a common cause of failure in raising chicks. New-hatched chicks should not have any feed for 24 hours after hatching, and in most cases 48 hours is better.

To get eggs in abundance, it is necessary not only to place feed in the hen house but to get it into the hen's crop in the right proportion for manufacture of eggs.

THE FREEMAN'S CENT-A-WORD ADLETS SAVE MONEY, TIME AND WORRIMENT--

NO NEW CASES OF SMALLPOX HERE

There were no new cases of smallpox reported in Kingston over Sunday. The situation seems to be under control at the present time. The morning Mrs. Johnston and her daughter vaccinated the pupils at school No. 5.

TWO INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

The young son of John Haas of Kingston is in the Kingston City hospital with possible internal injuries sustained Sunday when the car was struck by a car driven by George Simmons of 16 East Grand in the Saugerties road, a short distance beyond the Marz.

According to the report of the accident made to police headquarters, Mr. Haas was on the road headed west when the Simmons car tried to pass between the parked car and the Haas car. Both cars were badly damaged.

Victim Finnerty, 3 years old, of 14 1/2 Ave. street, was struck by an auto driven by James C. Ennis of E. D. No. 3, on the Rondout Creek Bridge on Sunday. According to the police report the boy ducked from under the falling along a foot path and ran in front of the car. He was not badly hurt.

CROSSED WIRES CAUSED 2 ALARMS

Weekend Hose was called out twice on still alarms and in both cases crossed wires were the cause. Last morning a short circuit called a fireman to the corner of Washington and Lucas avenues where a pole had become crossed. Damage was quickly taken care of.

Sunday evening about 10 o'clock a Ford sedan owned by and Richtmyer of Washington avenue became crossed and smoke and attracted a crowd as the car stopped in front of Van Wagenen's on Wall street. Someone sent a call for the firemen, but Henry Valentine of the Conner & Valentine undertaking firm, came along at that time and quickly taking in the alarm he pulled out his jack-knife and cut the troublesome wire. The car was no more. The crowd quickly dispersed and when the firemen arrived they found their services were needed.

COMMISSION WILL APPRAISE LAND

Judge James Jenkins, Joel Brink George Garrison, commissioners appointed by Judge Joseph M. Fowler to take testimony and award damages for lands to be taken by condemnation proceedings for the extension and improvement of post office highway No. 231, met this morning at 11 o'clock and an agreement was taken at that time. The commission will appraise the land on the 21st of June. John W. Hart, county attorney, who is engaged in the trial of an action in the court, asked for an adjournment of that ground. The commission is to appraise lands of the R. Neuman and the Highland Park Association in Highland for highway improvement. The commission will purchase of rights of way made an offer which was rejected and becomes necessary to acquire the lands by condemnation.

Whittaker Still Trucking. Driver H. Whittaker, of 109 Hun street, was employed by the Charles D. Bishop for the last year and is still going on with all of his trucking.

TO CONDEMN LAND FOR BRIDGE ROAD

The town board of Saugerties met Saturday night and adopted a resolution authorizing the town superintendent to proceed to acquire by condemnation proceedings the lands needed to complete county road No. 3, which connects the village of Connelly with the Saugerties end of the Rondout Creek Bridge. The matter is now in the hands of County Attorney John W. Eckert and it is expected that no time will be lost. The land needed crosses the property of the Hasbrouck estate and lands owned by the Delaware Valley and Kingston Company.

SOLOMON RODNEY STATE CHAMPION

K. H. S. continues to roll up honors. The name of the local school has now been carried statewide for excellence in public speaking. At Hamilton College, last Saturday, a prize speaking contest was held in which ten sections of the east were represented. The participants at this final contest were those chosen in a competitive sectional championship held several weeks ago. About fifteen high schools were represented in each section contest, so that in all there were about one hundred and fifty of the larger high schools represented in the finals of Saturday.

At the sectional contest for this district, held two weeks ago Saturday at Albany, J. Solomon Rodney of Kingston came out first. This gave him the privilege of competing at Hamilton on last Saturday. Mr. Rodney continued in his fine delivery in the finals, and when the judges handed in their decision, it was first place for the Kingston orator. Hamilton Bookbinder, of the Utica Free Academy, took second prize. Mr. Rodney had for his address, William MacArthur's "The National Apostasy." Mr. Bookbinder delivered an oration on "The Honor of the United States Senate on the Auction Block," a very stirring essay. The judges were three professors at the college, one the instructor in English and rhetoric, and two instructors in oratory.

This, however, is not the first time Kingston has won in the Hamilton contest. In 1907, John T. Loughran went there as a representative of K. A. and took first prize. Edward T. Stille represented K. H. S. in 1917, and won third prize. The winning of this prize well shows the value of oratorical training at the high school. In winning the prize Mr. Rodney won honor for both himself and his school.

NEAR EAST CLOTHING COLLECTION CONTINUES

The chairman of the clothing committee, Near East Relief, wishes to inform the public that the collection of clothing will continue throughout the week until Saturday May 19, and that the location of all bundles ready for delivery be telephoned to the State Charities Aid office on John street, telephone 1632. Those who prefer to deliver their own bundles may do so during the week at the board of health office at the city hall, or at the State Charities Aid office, John street.

NO HIGH SCHOOL GAME TUESDAY

The Port Jervis-Kingston baseball game which was postponed from last Saturday, cannot be played tomorrow. The officials have arranged to have it played on June 16. The tennis team went in Cornwall today to play off the postponed match of last Saturday.

THIRD OF SENATE TOURING EUROPE

(By William K. Hutchinson, International News Staff Correspondent.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, May 14.—When the senate of the 68th congress convenes next December approximately one-third of its membership will be primed with international views obtained by personal inspection trips over Europe during the long recess. The senatorial exodus to Europe this summer has been the greatest ever witnessed. At times it would almost have been possible to hold a session of the senate on foreign soil, as general had been the stampede across the Atlantic to get first hand view of conditions.

OIL COMPANIES ANNOUNCE CUT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 14.—The Joseph Seep Agency here, buyers for Standard Oil, announces, effective at 10 o'clock today a cut in crude oil prices at the wells ranging from 10 to 25 cents a barrel on eastern grades.

Findlay, O., May 14.—A ten cent reduction in the prices of central west and Wyoming crude oil was announced today by the Ohio Oil Company here.

TO RAISE Y. W. C. A. HIGH JINKS AT FUND NEXT WEEK EAST KINGSTON

The date for the campaign to raise funds for the Kingston Young Women's Christian Association has been set for May 21 to 26, and the chairman of the executive campaign committee is Miss Sarah Horton.

The amount of money to be raised will be a budget of $25,000 for two years. Of this amount, $10,000 will be set aside immediately for a reserve fund to be used for some permanent investment, yet to be decided upon, in order to provide a permanent self-supporting Y. W. C. A. home for Kingston girls. There will be an immediate need of $1,200 for the furnishing and equipment necessary to start the work at the present headquarters, at the Mechanics' Building, 14 Henry street. This will also be the headquarters for the campaign about to be inaugurated.

To return to the finances, after deducting the $10,000 and the $1,200 there will be left for the full budget for each of the two opening years $7,000. It will be seen by the foregoing that the committee having in charge the work of inaugurating a Young Women's Christian Association in Kingston has taken a middle ground as far as beginning the work is concerned. They have thought it unwise to start in so insignificant a way as to belittle the whole project and at the same time they have considered it equally unwise to start in a big way until they have seen what the two years' experience will warrant.

That the Y. W. C. A. is an actual want in Kingston has been so thoroughly demonstrated by the fact that already about 1,200 girls and women have signed, and many have paid for membership pledges, that it seems useless to dwell upon that phase of the matter. Possibly the business men realize the need the most, for any business man prefers to employ a girl who has the right sort of place to spend her evenings in preference to one who has to spend her evenings on the streets which is the only alternative for many girls at present. There are a great many girls employed in this city, and they want the right sort of good times. It is up to the community to provide a place for such recreational conditions as well as educational facilities, just as much as it has been up to the community for years to look out for the welfare of our boys by providing them with a Y. M. C. A.

PARKER PUNTURES
PARDON PROPAGANDA

Alton B. Parker, president of the National Federation, has written to President Harding proposing that all political prisoners be made subject to parole on swearing allegiance to the Constitution. Judge Parker points out that the propaganda for the pardon of these prisoners is deceiving part of the public and says that if they refused to take the proposed oath the public would realize that the prisoners are held because they refuse to surrender their intention to undermine the peace of the country.

The Black Patrol Of The State
Troopers And Sheriff's Office Round
Up Several Negroes Saturday And Sunday And Disarm Them Of Weapons.

Three big Colt's army revolvers were added to the collection of Sheriff Kolts, Saturday night. The guns were seized at East Kingston, making about a dozen seized in that section from negroes within the past ten days.

About 11 o'clock Saturday night word came to the sheriff's office over the telephone that a man had been murdered near a brickyard in the East Kingston section and that men were wanted to catch the murderer. Sheriff Kolts, Deputies Jocelyn and Bongartz and State Trooper Ross started quickly in a touring car and were met by Deputy Sheriff DeCicco, Deputy Charles McCullough and Constable Michael McCullough. They learned there had been no murder but James Green, 24 years old, a negro, was rounded up, charged with slashing DeCicco, and a knife taken from him. Green will be arraigned today at East Kingston after spending the night in the Ulster county jail. DeCicco was not badly cut.

Later it was learned that there was a game in progress on one of the brickyards and that some of the players were heavily armed. William Boyd, 24 years old, a negro, and Andrew Hill, another negro aged 30 years, were rounded up, and a .45 calibre automatic taken from Boyd and a .32 calibre Colt from Hill. They will be arraigned later at East Kingston.

Sunday morning Philip Rogers, 22 years old, a negro, and Herman Jackson, 30 years old, a negro, were arrested. Rogers was sentenced Sunday morning by Judge DeCicco to six months in the county jail, and Jackson was fined $25 and given a suspended sentence of six months in the county jail. A .32 calibre Colt was taken from Jackson.

State Troopers H. P. Ross and C. A. Roche, who are stationed at East Kingston, are known as the Black Horse Patrol, as both ride big black horses.

KELLY ALL STARS
DEFEAT WILBUR SCOUTS

The Kelly All Stars of Rondout opened their baseball season on Sunday afternoon by defeating the fast stepping Wilbur Boy Scouts by a 9-0 score. In their lineup they had such stars as Craigien who tried out last Sunday with the Colonials of this city, also "Jacko" Conlon of the old "Wilbur Feds."

The leading feature of the day was a double play by "Joey" Coughlin, unassisted, that stopped the attempted ninth inning rally of the scouts. Leonard carried off the batting honors by making a triple with two out and two men on in the first of the ninth. Great things may be expected in the future from Kelly's All Stars.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLACE OF SCENIC WONDERS

Tribute to the Grand Canyon Brings It Vividly Before the Reader's Vision.

In the pulseless air, under the blue of the desert sky, a titanic chasm, stretching farther than eye can see. In its vast depths a great mountain range, carved by wind and water into palace and pyramid, obelisk and sphinx, pinnacle and turret, tower and dome. A wilderness of rugged, beautiful forms—not cold gray of rock or monotone green of forest, but glowing in red and blue and purple and orange melted and mixed by cosmic fires.

An abyss of ever-changing color and form. In the morning, delicately lovely with upsurging mists of faintest rose and palest lavender and purest white, through which peak and pyramid gleam. Under the glare of noonday sun, overwhelming in stark form and burning hue. At twilight, asleep in soft purples and blues of night. Under the moon, a mystery of dim forms and faint shadows.

Majestic in sculptural beauty, dazzling in glorious hues, serene, superb, in the pulseless air, under the blue of the desert sky—Christian Science Monitor.
